

LexisNexis & NZBA introduce a new one stop law shop

LexisNexis New Zealand announced today that it has proudly partnered with The New Zealand Bar Association to introduce a special package consisting of hundreds of premium legal online titles exclusive to the association's barrister membership.

The eLibrary package is designed to provide a 'one stop shop' through which law professionals can access all the legal content they need from a single trusted provider using efficiencies of scale for savings.

"We recognise that barristers, similar to sole practitioners, have unique requirements in that they operate as sole traders with limited access to the extent of resources available at larger law firms," said Rachel Travers, Executive Director of LexisNexis New Zealand.

"With this new eLibrary package, barristers are now able to benefit from LexisNexis' unique content, at an affordable price and through one trusted provider –saving time, money and frustration. And for those who are space constrained, having this accessible online saves storage and costs related to storing multiple books."

Through LexisNexis and The New Zealand Bar Association, barristers are able to benefit from their full membership to access an extensive range of New Zealand and International research and reference content.

Law professionals can feel confident having access to content that they can use to succeed, through major local and international reference works and titles including one of the latest tools to the market, CaseBase Case Citator, Practical Guidance, Laws of New Zealand, Practitioner Books Online and more. Also included are more than 45 international titles.
